Machine Vision is a large and diverse field that covers many markets, industries and technologies. Most of the data available today are on financial data of a few bigger companies or on the standard component manufacturers.

Our understanding of the markets and applications as well as of the needs for data enables AMC to provide market intelligence reports and other intelligence products that bring value to everybody interested or involved in machine vision.

Our understanding of the operative needs in a company make the difference to other market research firms. Market intelligence, in our understanding is needed in almost all departments of a company, either if you are developing and marketing a product, if you are in sales, marketing, business development or in management. Specially if you are in finance or about to invest in machine vision related business- market intelligence is a key.

In order to ensure a maximum value, services for market research and consulting complete our portfolio.
